Dear children, parents, and teachers,

Imagine a little child waking up during a thunderstorm. Lightning flashes, thunder shakes the windows, and the child cries out, “Daddy, I am afraid!”

The father comes into the room, sits beside the child, and holds the child’s hand. The storm continues, but the child begins to feel peaceful. What has changed? The child knows: “I am not alone.”

In today’s Gospel, Jesus speaks about frightening events: the destruction of Jerusalem, suffering, and signs in the heavens. These are serious words. Jesus does not pretend that life will always be easy. But in the middle of this frightening passage, he gives his disciples a message of hope: “Stand up and raise your heads, because your redemption is drawing near.” Jesus is telling us: “When you are afraid, remember that I am near. Trouble will not have the final word. Trust in me.”

Dear children, what makes you afraid? Perhaps a difficult test, being left out by friends, making a mistake, or disappointing someone you love.When something troubles you, remember that you can speak to Jesus. A simple prayer is enough: “Jesus, I am afraid. Please stay close to me.” Then talk to a parent, teacher, or another trusted adult. Jesus often helps us through the people who care for us. Asking for help is an act of courage.

Dear parents, your children learn how to face difficulties by watching you. When something goes wrong at home, they notice your words, your reactions, and your choices.You do not need to have every answer. Sometimes the most reassuring words you can say are: “This is difficult, but we will face it together. Let us pray and take the next step.” Make your home a place where children can speak honestly about their fears and mistakes. Before correcting them, listen to them. Let them know that even when they fail, they are still loved. Such love helps them understand the faithful love of God.

Dear teachers, some children enter your classroom carrying worries that you cannot see. A child who seems distracted may be anxious. A child who struggles may already feel discouraged. Your patience, encouragement, and fair correction can give that child new hope. One sentence—“I know you can improve, and I will help you”—can make a great difference. You help children raise their heads when you remind them that a mistake does not define their worth.

Today’s Gospel also reminds all of us that many things we depend upon can change. Buildings can fall. Plans can fail. Success and popularity can disappear. Our deepest hope must rest in Jesus, whose love remains faithful.That hope should lead us to care for one another. When someone is frightened, we can stay beside them. When someone is struggling, we can offer help. When someone feels alone, we can welcome them.

This week, let us practice one simple habit as a family or in the classroom: ask, “Is anything worrying you today?” Listen carefully, and then bring that worry to Jesus in prayer.

Remember the child in the storm. The father’s presence did not immediately stop the thunder, but it helped the child face it.Jesus does not promise us a life without storms. He promises his faithful presence and calls us to trust in his saving power. So when difficulties come, let us hear his words: “Stand up and raise your heads.”

Let us pray:

Lord Jesus, when we are afraid, help us trust in you. Bless our children, guide our parents, and strengthen our teachers. Teach us to listen, to encourage, and to care for one another. Help us face each day with faith and hope. Amen.
