MISSION SUNDAY MESSAGE

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ,
A little boy was walking along a beach where hundreds of starfish had washed onto the sand. He began picking them up, one at a time, and putting them back into the water.
A man watching him said, "There are so many starfish here. You cannot save them all. What difference can you make?"The boy picked up another starfish, gently placed it in the sea, and replied, "I made a difference to that one."

On this Mission Sunday, that simple story invites us to ask: Whose life can I touch with the love of Jesus?
When we hear the word "mission," we often think of priests, sisters, and lay missionaries who leave their homes and travel to distant countries. We remember their sacrifices with gratitude. Many serve in difficult places, learning new languages, caring for the sick, educating children, and bringing the Gospel to communities that have never heard about Jesus.But mission is also our responsibility. Through Baptism, each one of us has received a share in the mission of Christ.

Jesus says, "Go into all the world and proclaim the gospel" (Mark 16:15). He entrusted His message to ordinary people—people who sometimes struggled with fear, doubt, and weakness. Yet, with the strength of the Holy Spirit, they carried His love into the world.The same Lord calls us today.
We might say, "Father, I do not know enough about the Bible. I cannot preach. I am too busy with work and family." But sharing Jesus does not always begin with a sermon. Often, it begins with listening, kindness, and a willingness to make time for someone.

In the Gospel, Jesus notices people whom others overlook. He stops for the blind man calling from the roadside. He welcomes children. He reaches out to those who feel rejected. His love helps people recognize their dignity and discover the mercy of God.
If we want to share Christ, we must learn to notice people as He does.Perhaps there is an elderly person who waits all week for someone to call. Perhaps there is a new family in our parish who comes to Mass and leaves without anyone greeting them. Perhaps there is a young person who smiles in public but carries a heavy burden inside.

Our mission may begin with a simple question: "How are you doing?" Then we must be willing to listen to the answer.Our first mission field is often our own home. Parents, whenever you pray with your children, speak about God's goodness, and show them how to forgive, you are helping them know Jesus. Children learn about faith through our words, but also through the way we live. If we speak about love in church but speak harshly at home, our children receive a confusing message. When they see us apologize, care for someone in need, and remain faithful during difficulties, they see the Gospel taking shape in daily life.

Dear young people, you also have a mission. In your school, college, workplace, and friendships, you can bring the presence of Christ. Stand beside someone who is being excluded. Refuse to join in cruel gossip. Have the courage to say that your faith matters to you.
A simple invitation—"Would you like to come to church with me?"—can open a door in someone's life. Our example matters, and so do our words. We do not need to have an answer to every question. We can simply say, "Prayer helps me," or "I believe God has not abandoned you." We can offer to pray with someone who is struggling.

Mission Sunday also reminds us to look beyond our own parish. We belong to a worldwide Church. There are communities where people walk long distances to attend Mass, where churches have few resources, and where missionaries serve with very little support.Our prayers and offerings help sustain that mission. When we give generously, we participate in the work of spreading the Gospel. Our contribution becomes an expression of love for brothers and sisters we may never meet.

Today, let us make three simple commitments: pray for one person, help one person, and invite one person closer to Jesus.Like the boy on the beach, we cannot reach everyone. But we can make a difference to the person God places before us.
